Let’s take a clue from the defective Gregorian year, the one with only 355 days in it. If a year can be stipulated to be defective by some days, why can’t a decade, century, or millennium be stipulated to be defective by a year? Why don’t we just say that the first decade

Let’s take a clue from the defective Gregorian year, the one with only 355 days in it. If a year can be stipulated to be defective by some days, why can’t a decade, century, or millennium be stipulated to be defective by a year? Why don’t we just say that the first decade in our western calendar was short by a year? Then as a result the first century was similarly short, and the first millennium too. Thereafter nothing’s defective. This stipulation performs a cultural function; it aligns the beginning of every decade, century, and millennium except the very first of each of these with an auspiciously numbered year.
