Light the wick and run

To the candles for pompous picnics, there is fun to be had at the animal games. Yeast and sourdough are the staple grains. When one runs for the cover, there is food to be had in Hannover. The night train shuffle leaves many perplexed in a total state of disrepair. But hark, stand by, for Kobenhavn approaches from across the Great Belt tunnel, appearing out of misty weather while passengers sit huddled over cups of strong coffee and expensive croissants. The eleventh hour is upon us all.

There is one more question for the Conductor at Koln relating to the apples on the Nachtzug and the signage on the platform of a quizzical nature. Fountain pens date merrily upon the seaside, yet one is left wondering if the sky of Nepture will ever care to glimpse down into the depths of the deepest blue underground and sleeping
